Office Supplies Out of Control??? You're Not as Stuck as You Think

How much are office supplies really costing you?

Generally there are two ways that office supplies are managed – an open access buffet or behind a locked cage with limited hours of availability. Both cost you money!

In order to gain cost savings and visibility to materials use, managers need to know how and where supplies are being used, while still providing easy access to them. Enter SupplyPro!

The Solution

SupplyPro's Point-of-Use dispensing solutions bring control and accountability to office supplies – from simple supply materials like pencils and paperclips to more expensive or desirable items like batteries and toner cartridges.

Managers can place the solutions at critical locations to increase employee uptime and access to materials while harnessing the extensive reporting capabilities to finally see where everything is being used and who is using it… for every transaction, 24/7.

SmartDrawer – The most versatile and configurable solution from SupplyPro, SmartDrawer can be configured to provide the tailored levels of access control to your supplies from absolute, single-item dispensing and returns to open stock, high-density storage.

SupplyAgent – Compartment-level control and quick access to a wide range of supplies. With this solution you can store a large volume of materials in a very small footprint and still have general accountability for their use.

SupplyBay – This solution handles high-volume throughput while giving absolute control of materials. Each item that is dispensed is accounted for by employee, department, cost center, etc.
